Information Technology Association of America - Information Security Program

Whether information security firms want to build revenue enhancing business relationships or extend their reach on critical public policy issues, they find the ITAA Information Security program a valuable resource. More than 200 companies participate, from the largest systems integrators to entrepreneurs with the latest niche technologies. Monthly committee meetings set the industry's agenda for both cyber security matters of the moment and issues that will be drawing attention in the months ahead. Outreach to government agencies is a regular program feature, as well as frequent interaction with vertical industry groups with an interest in critical infrastructure protection. Opportunities to reach beyond information security to homeland security, defense, intelligence and other ITAA programs makes this a truly leveraged business opportunity.
